We got a hosting from hostmonster for our site. We've paid a lot of money to them, and they said they're not giving our source code to anyone. But I got a strange email from them. They emailed me and told me the following. To your question: Do you have the source code to your website and/or domain? We do not. When you purchase a hosting package from us, we provide you with the software that was required to create the server's configuration. That's it. We added CPanel to our hosting packages. With Cpanel, you will be able to: a) Own your domains and set up the DNS b) Set up your Mail server c) Set up your MySQL server d) Set up your File server e) Set up your FTP server etc. The cpanel you purchase from us has nothing to do with the software you get from us. They also said I can only consider the email as a scam because it looks like they use many of the words from a scam email, so i'm almost certain they're not real. Does anyone know if they are real? A: Unfortunately it looks like they 50b96ab0b6

Get more info from A: The problem is due to the outer.tooltip. It's a plugin. Adding the following to the plugin, removes the issue: tooltips: { callbacks: { beforeShow: function(){ if ($(this).tooltip("tip").css("display") == "inline") { $(this).tooltip("position",{ my: "right top", at: "right top+2" }); } } } Warning: getimagesize(failed to open stream:
